

vBulletin Announces Extended Pre-Sale Period for New 4.0 Publishing Suite

New Software Suite Setting Sales Records

LOS ANGELES, CA, Oct 30, 2009 (MARKETWIRE via COMTEX News Network) -- vBulletin Solutions, a division of Internet Brands (NASDAQ: INET), announced today that it is extending the pre-sale period for its new vBulletin 4.0 Publishing Suite. The extension is the result of record demand for the product over the prior two weeks.

The current pre-sale offer expires at midnight Pacific Time tonight. The pre-sale extension announced today will begin at midnight Pacific Time October 31, 2009 and will continue through 11:59 p.m. Pacific Time on November 16, 2009.

During this extension period, the price of the Publishing Suite will be $160 for existing vBulletin customers with active licenses, a discount of more than 40 percent off of the regular price of the product. New customers can purchase the Suite for the discounted price of $235 during this period.

"The vBulletin 4.0 series is the best product we've ever brought to market, and we're blown away by the level of sales activity," said Joe Rosenblum, chief technology officer at Internet Brands. "We are grateful for the strength and passion of the huge vBulletin community."

"We're leaders in community management and social media and are investing heavily in its development and evolution. We're excited about our development path for vBulletin 4.0, and customers can expect a robust series of feature developments in 2010," Rosenblum added.

More information about the features of vBulletin 4.0 Publishing Suite can be found at www.vbulletin.com. This new pre-sale offer will be reflected on the site at midnight Pacific Time tonight.
